

Aldermanic candidates for election

By Donna Vallieres
Herald Staff writer

This is the last in a series of aldermanic candidates' profiles.

Today we feature Gerry Duffus, John MacCormac, and Doug Mumford, three of the seven contenders for the three available seats on council which will be filled after election day on Saturday, Nov. 19.

Duffus, a property manager, MacCormac, a painter, and Mumford, a security guard and incumbent alderman, present their views on Terrace, municipal council, and what they would do if elected.

Other candidates vying for the aldermanic seats are incumbents Helmut Giesbrecht and Jack Talstra, Lily Meilsen and Alan Soutar.

This is the conclusion of our three-part series on council candidates which was preceded last week by a rundown of regional district candidates for electoral area Ca and school trustee candidates.

Tomorrow in the Daily Herald we will have a complete recap of candidates running in all elections.

Mumford

Doug Mumford has a whole list of concerns and a detailed platform but his major "plank" in his platform is his role as alderman.

Mumford, bowling lanes owner and security guard, was elected to council by acclamation in the by-election held last June.

"It is my duty as an alderman to listen and consider the views of all individuals, clubs, minority groups, pressure groups, friends, non-friends, delegations or whatever," he said. He believes it is his job to help people with their goals as long as those goals do not conflict with the rights of others. Another duty of council is to "find, welcome and foster new industries," Mumford said. Terrace has suffered from a lack of diversification in industrial development, he added. "We should not be trying to put obstacles in the path of a developer, but we should greet him warmly and allow him to proceed with limited restrictions," Mumford stated. "Our rigid restrictive attitude is forcing us out of the market for industry."

A long range plan should be made to encourage secondary industry, according to Mumford. This development plan would include future industrial sites, residential sites and recreational sites.

Such a plan would have to include Thornhill, Mumford said, if not by amalgamation then by co-operation between the two communities.

Co-operation between Terrace and Kitimat must also be encouraged, he said, because the two are economically dependent and should both benefit from any industrial, recreational or medical facility in either town.

"Better service for less cost through better management" will have to be provided to municipal owned recreational facilities, Mumford said.

Concerning rezoning, Mumford stated he would like to return as an alderman "to continue the fight for the rezoning of the 4700 block, Lazelle Avenue."

A public hearing should be held to give the property owners, along with everyone in Terrace, a chance to give their views for or against the rezoning.

"I feel the citizens of Terrace should never be denied a chance to express their views," Mumford stated. "On the contrary, they should be given every chance to give input to as many decisions as possible."

Of his five month record on council, Mumford stated he has worked hard to learn the systems and procedures of municipal government and feels he is now in a position to give more input.

"I have supported all positive development proposals, and am pleased to say that I took part in recommending the library referendum," he said.

"I feel that my involvement in many aspects of life in many communities has taught me to make decisions," Mumford said. "I stand by my judgements but I can, when proven wrong, admit it and change my view."

Duffus

Gerry Duffus describes himself as a "back up man" and wants to back up the people of Terrace council.

Duffus, who served two terms as an alderman on council but did not run in the last municipal elections, stressed that municipal affairs are "people services," such as policing, firefighting, roads, sidewalks, drainage sewage, water systems and garbage disposal.

Anyone elected to council must be familiar with these areas and must do a great deal of homework before making decisions on council which will affect these areas.

"Healthy and intelligent discussions with fellow aldermen, seeking the advice of staff members, a fair amount of common sense and logic, and most important of all listening," are the things needed to make council work, Duffus said.

Anyone elected to develop policy must be well acquainted with the legal documentaries, such as resolutions, bills and bylaws, public works, and finance, Duffus said.

"Money can be dribbled away in small amounts," he warned. Borrowing arrangements for large projects can run into hundreds of thousands of dollars, Duffus said, so this money must be spent wisely.

The "sensitive business" of recreation is another responsibility of council, he said, and the mayor and council should meet with the recreation commission monthly.

Discussions on how to improve and upgrade recreation facilities in Terrace would result in a smoother operation of these facilities and greater use of the recreation complexes. "We have weathered an economic storm," Duffus said optimistically. "Those of us who are there now should decide to make this our home town."

Earlier in the town's history, residents were told of a copper smelter, a steel mill, port development and railway expansion. As a result of this, people made "some panicky and expedient decisions," Duffus said.

All of these things will come in time, he said, but we have to decide whether we still want them or not. How we can receive them and how we can adjust to them if they do come.

"Most important is that by taking these under consideration, now, we can derive the greatest benefit for Terrace," Duffus stated. "The mayor and council are expected to and must give the leadership and direction."

The alternative to this is another and bust, he said.

MacCormac

John MacCormac said his reasons for getting into municipal politics for the first time as "many and varied."

He first decided to run when, during the municipal by-election in June, two candidates got in by acclamation, a situation he feels is "unhealthy."

MacCormac stated he has four major challenges if he gets elected to council.

They are getting Terrace an expanded, permanent job base, keeping what Terrace already has, administering the community in an economical way while maintaining services, and "doing the above three in a way that works with the people of Terrace — not just for them."

People don't need a "big brother" approach from council, MacCormac said, and instead should be able to determine their own wishes.

He has specific plans to see Terrace grow, and feels we must show solid community support before soliciting help from senior governments.

However, the social, political, economic and environmental aspects of development must be considered before any steps are taken to develop Terrace.

Skeenaview Lodge is one of MacCormac's special concerns. Council should "demand" that decisions involving planning for the senior citizen care facility should be made with local input, MacCormac said, and that is something the present council is not doing.

MacCormac is not personally involved in the lodge, but said he is making it an issue because "nobody else has taken a stand on it."

The wages and monetary loss to the community could be as high as $3 million, MacCormac said. Skeenaview employs 100 people who could lose their jobs, he said, "and we can't afford to have anymore unemployed in this town."

The real loss, though, MacCormac feels, is that 36 residents have already been transferred as part of the provincial government phase-out of the lodge and nobody knows what's happening.

"I want to let people know what the hell is going on up there," he said.

MacCormac feels council could do more to promote secondary industry in Terrace.

"It's a responsibility of council to seek monies whether local or out of town," he said. Council has to come up with a more feasible plan to promote investment within Terrace.

"We should seriously look at 1,000 acres west of the airport," which could be available for industrial land, he said.

especially if Thornhill is against amalgamation.

MacCormac stated he was definitely against spot zoning, but since 1972, councils have promised they would draw up a master zoning plan, which no council has done since then.

MacCormac concluded his platform by stating that he has no conflict of interest in serving on council and that everyone has to join together if Terrace is to prosper.

Whale beached in Stewart

STEWART, B.C. (CP) — A young whale beached itself Tuesday on mudflats near this British Columbia coastal community after being freed from the flats earlier in the day.

Mayor Ian MacLeod said the whale, which had been freed by local citizens, beached itself again shortly after dark, and appeared to be in critical condition.

"He appeared to be very disoriented," MacLeod said. "He had lots of opportunities to get out to deep water, but just wouldn't go. He kept on swimming into things, like there was something wrong with his sonar."

MacLeod said a local B.C. Hydro worker, who was watching the animal, said the whale looked very sick and was "pessimistic that the whale could survive the night on the mud flats."

The mayor said Vancouver Aquarium officials were contacted and offered to assist in any way they could.

"If the whale is still alive in the morning, we'll attempt to move it into one of the shallow salt water pools in the harbor," he said. "They (the aquarium) indicated they would come in and do anything they could to help."

He said the men who helped free the whale noticed it had several old scars that they said could have been inflicted by gun shots.

He said the whale was 10-feet long, between 800 and 1,000 pounds and was greyish-white in color.

French fries smell fishy

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — The British Columbia legislature's food inquiry committee said Tuesday it would investigate the pricing practices of McCain Foods Ltd., Canada's largest french fry potato processor.

Several committee members feel that McCain's, which is believed to have received close to $20 million in various government aid programs, is trying to put a Delta, B.C., frozen food plant out of business.

The committee voted unanimously to call top McCain's executives and senior officials of the federal department of regional economic expansion (DREE), which gives grants to industry.

George Spetifore, owner of the Delta food plant, said his firm will close in December because he cannot compete in a price war being waged by McCain of New Brunswick and McLeans of Prince Edward Island.

Spetifore has said that the two eastern firms have received substantial federal and provincial aid in the form of DREE grants and freight subsides, while he has been consistently refused both federal and provincial government assistance.

Alan Barker, manager of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Co-operative told the inquiry Monday that Spetifore stopped buying potatoes from Fraser Valley farmers, leaving 14,000 tons worth almost $1 million without a market.

Committee member Cyril Sheldorf (SC-Terrace) told the inquiry the price war "appears to be predatory pricing and if that type of thing continues any planning of future production (within B.C.) is absolutely useless."

Committee chairman Len Bawtree (SC-Shuswap) said he expects McCain's and DREE officials to co-operate with the committee, but did not set a date for their appearance.

The meeting Tuesday completed the first session of public hearings that started in May, but committee members said more hearings are likely next year.

Bawtree said that the inquiry and various studies has cost taxpayers $438,000.

Prisoners to be taken off commercial flights

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Penitentiary Service has stopped moving prisoners on commercial flights and henceforth will use military planes for transfers, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The move follows the observation in a report last June by a special Commons subcommittee that members were "concerned about the movement of dangerous prisoners on commercial aircraft." The subcommittee, appointed to investigate prison violence, said transfers should be made by train, prison buses, or military or other government aircraft.

Air Canada protested movement of prisoners on its aircraft last year when several passengers cancelled tickets on learning that hostage-takers were being transferred to an eastern penitentiary on the same flight from Vancouver.

Cattle weary

PRINCETON, B.C. (CP) — Motorists travelling the southern Trans-Canada Highway between here and Hope Tuesday night had to contend with a herd of wandering cattle.

Police said that two cattle trucks collided 38 kilometres west of here, and as a result, 165 head of cattle were set free.

RCMP said it would be some time before the cattle, which were roaming the highway about six kilometres on each side of the accident site, could be rounded up.

Murder trial over

A Terrace man has been sentenced to life imprisonment after being found guilty of a second degree murder charge in connection with the death of another Terrace man.

Garth Clayton Young, 28, was found guilty in Prince Rupert Supreme Court yesterday after a 12-day trial in which another man, Patrick John Pepin, 17, was found not guilty.

The body of Paul Andrew Arnold, 26, was found at the end of a logging road near Kalum Lake Drive north of Terrace last March.

A coroner's report read at the trial stated that Arnold had died from strangulation.

Recreation chatter

During the past several months "Recreation Chatter" has been neglected. The District of Terrace, Parks and Recreation Dept., which intends to resume writing this column to provide the Community with current information regarding the Programmes and special events being offered.

The news this week comes from the Recreation Program area, which is co-ordinated by Sharon Lough. We are presently in the idea finding process for the upcoming winter session of Recreational Programmes, which commence on January 23, 1978. The aim is to provide everyone with the opportunity to choose from a broad variety of recreational activities.

We'd appreciate input of ideas from individuals and groups in the Community as to the type of Programmes they would like to participate in. We'd welcome proposals for new programmes from people who would like to instruct a course. We'd also like people to suggest programmes they would like to see happening in the Community because they can identify a need for it. However, we do not intend to conflict with existing programmes; we aim to support them.

In regard to instructors for the programmes, we are looking for persons who have a reasonable amount of expertise, plus the energy and leadership qualities which are essential to every successful programme. A potential instructor doesn't necessarily have to be an expert craftsman or excellent at a sport for example. A sincere desire to share their craft or sport with others, plus their willingness to give their efforts are the important qualities. We will give the instructor all the assistance they require in terms of resources or teaching tips.

Sharon Lough would like to meet and chat with people in regards to their programme ideas and concerns, and also with those who are keen on sharing their enthusiasm and skills in a particular recreational pursuit by becoming an instructor. Sharon can be contacted at the Recreation Office or call 638-1177.

We are working in co-operation with Frances Long, the Community Education Services Co-ordinator for the School District and Northwest Community College, to put together a joint programme handbook which will promote all of the educational and recreational programmes and services available during the January to April winter session. Registration day for all of the recreational and educational winter session programmes will occur at the same time and place; January 14th at the Terrace Arena Banquet Room. By co-operating in this venture we aim to provide a more efficient service to the Community.

NDP held Fire drills meeting no good

Jim Fulton, New Democratic Party candidate for the Federal Skeena Riding, spoke to a full house of supporters on Saturday, November 12th. In his address, he touched upon many of the serious problems that face residents in this region. Unemployment and the lack of sensible economic plans for development were highlighted.

These problems remain, Mr. Fulton noted, despite the fact that the present MP is a cabinet Minister in the Liberal Government. As evidence of this pointed to the transportation fiasco on the North coast. This proves that a change of representation is necessary.

Mr. Fulton's speech was preceded by meetings designed to establish an election strategy for the next Federal election. Party members expressed great confidence that Skeena will be returned to the NDP in the next Parliament. If the success of the Saturday meetings and Social is an indication, this prediction should prove to be correct.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Two men claiming to be witch doctors have been arrested for cheating more than 50 people with promises that they could plant money and jewellery and grow money and jewellery trees.

The men collected valuables, promising to return in a few days with the valuables multiplied 77 times. But they didn't come back and police have found many of the goods in pawn shops where they had been hocked for a third of their value.

Police said many of those duped were literate people, including English school teachers.

VICTORIA (CP) — Fire drills at schools here are inadequate and represent a hazard, a teacher says in a brief to Greater Victoria school trustees.

David Caddell, a teacher in the nearby Sooke school district whose children attend Greater Victoria schools, told trustees that fire drills are conducted in a cursory manner.

He said that that some children respond by hiding in the school until the alarm is over, then run back to their classrooms, attempting to find their teacher in the school or searching for brothers and sisters. Others leave the school and go home.

Getting the drill out of the way quickly and with a minimum of disruption often is the general aim of the exercise, Caddell said Monday.

Fire department personnel sometimes are made to feel unwelcome in the schools when they make inspections, he added.

Caddell recommended holding three or four fire drills in the first part of the school year, and at least one drill a month after that, with no advance warning, with one or more normal exits blocked, and when students are not in their normal places.

Opposition condemns government over RCMP

By DOUG LONG
OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative and New Democratic opposition combined Tuesday to attack the Liberal government for evading a principle of parliamentary government—ministerial responsibility for acts of RCMP security forces.

They condemned the cabinet for failing to accept the blame for a spate of alleged illegal actions by the federal police.

Their Commons comments, met by Liberal counter-attacks supported by Social Credit, came during a day devoted to business chosen by the Conservatives.

Later, the Liberal majority easily turned back a Progressive Conservative non-confidence motion which was supported by the New Democrats.

The votes on the motion and on an NDP amendment were identical, 104 to 65, with Social Credit supporting the government.

Standing of the 284-seat Commons is Liberal 141, Conservative 91, NDP 16, Social Credit 10, Independent 1 and vacant 5.

Both sides upheld the honor of the RCMP, accused the other of dragging the mud as a political expedient and levelled charges of incompetence and negligence concerning the handling of the affair.

FEARED DEFEAT
Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said only the Liberals would have ordered the RCMP in 1973 to steal Parti Quebecois membership lists because the party feared defeat in a forthcoming provincial election.

Diefenbaker accused former solicitors-general Jean-Pierre Goyer and Warren Allmand of giving direct orders to the force to carry out illegal activities.

Solicitor-General Francis Fox said it has always been government policy to provide general guidance to the force's security service, rather than assume control of day-to-day operations.

He said political intervention on a regular basis would leave the government open to charges of collusion.

The government has been saying opposition demands for tighter control of security services amounts to political intervention in the RCMP's day-to-day affairs.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark said that although there are important problems plaguing the country, including a sagging economy and threats to national unity, the principle of ministerial responsibility was chosen for debate because "if we destroy that principle we destroy the system of government we have in this country."

It has become clear that cabinet will not accept responsibility when the law has been broken, he said.

CLIMATE OF CONTEMPT
Justice Minister Ron Basford countered that the opposition was working to create "a climate of suspicion and contempt for the RCMP in the country."

The government has repeatedly said that all people and groups in the country must operate within the law and any other statement was an attempt to mislead the public, Basford said.

Eldon Woolliams (Calgary South), Conservative justice critic, said the government is dragging in a red herring by saying Conservative MPs are smearing the reputation of the RCMP.

The Liberals merely wanted to deflect public attention from the issue.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent labelled cabinet reaction to revelations of spying, break-ins and theft as "a debasement of Canadian politics."

The fundamental concern should be to protect liberty, not security. Any other response is phoney and dishonest, he charged.

The Conservative motion cited government failure to follow the principle of ministerial responsibility, pointing out its reluctance to appoint an allparty committee to study the role of ministers in security operations.

The NDP amendment condemned the government's failure to uphold the rule of law.

CITES PROBLEMS
Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova), who says he discovered a bugging device in his Parliament Hill office and has suggested the RCMP may have been involved, said there are constitutional problems governing RCMP authority.

The federal force should be given a more clearly defined role in security and intelligence and handed a prime function to fight organized crime, he said.

He said Fox is unhappy with the RCMP's performance against organized crime. He and others called for abolition of the police and security analysis group in the solicitor-general's department.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) said his biggest concern was the government's insensitivity to the preservation of human rights which depend on the maintenance of law and order.

Brewin said the RCMP must have known that some of its operations were illegal when they included mail interceptions, arson, breakins and theft.

Today, the Commons resumes debate on a government economic bill, designed to stimulate investment through tax cuts.

DISTRICT OF TERRACE Parks & Recreation Department EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

The Recreation Department is planning to offer a wide variety of recreational programmes. We invite applications from enthusiastic people who have some basic skill level and a desire to share their knowledge with others.

We'd like you to help us provide an exciting recreational program for our Community. Can you help?

Potential Instructors and Leaders for the upcoming twelve week winter session of recreational programs, which commence January 23rd, should contact Sharon Lough before November 30th, 1977, at 638-1177.

Gov't wins vote of non-confidence

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal majority in the Commons easily turned aside opposition votes of non-confidence Tuesday night which condemned the government for its handling of the RCMP affair.

The votes were 104 to 65 on a Progressive Conservative motion that condemned the government for the lack of ministerial responsibility and 104 to 65 for a New Democratic Party amendment which had the effect of condemning the government for not living up to the rule of law.

Library News

November 13-19, 1977, is the Canadian Children's Book Festival. It's to celebrate - celebrate a wealth of books for children written in Canada. Whether it's fact or fancy, you can ready our own version of it.

For adventure, try Honor Bound, in which Miles, a pioneer boy, listens to prophecies by an Ojibway medicine man, looks for treasure hidden in his log cabin, and wonders if his lost sister Honor will be found.

It is no normal doll that the wins Jane and Elizabeth, buy in a Toronto antique store. It seems to be a link with some unpleasant woman from the past, and it works a Double spell through the twins. Janet Lynn is the author of this tale of the supernatural.

Teddy, of The wooden people, makes marionettes to replace the friends he loses every time his father moves, taking the family with him. He tries to keep his people a secret from his often angry father, until the day of the talent show in Chalko Falls, Alberta, when his sisters and friends persuade him to produce a show for everyone.

Closer home, Ann Blades has written two charming tales - Mary of Mile 18, and a Boy of Tache. Tache is an Indian reserve, northwest of Prince George, and the beautiful landscapes painted in the book are familiar to all of us. Little Badger and the Fire Spirit, by Maria Campbell, author of Halfbreed, tells show a brave blind boy brought fire to man. The vivid full page illustrations reflect our mountainous winter scenes. Hugh Weatherby, in Tales the totems tell, recounts ten short stories behind some of the totem poles. They include stories of raven stealing the moon and of the whale keeping his promise.

Tony Baloney is fibbing again. Look at him wriggle and try to pretend. Tony Baloney is telling a lie; Phony old Tony Baloney, Goodbye!

For more nonsense rhymes, try Alligator Pie, or Garbage Delight, by Dennis Lee, or Down by Jim Long's Stage by Al Pittman. Verses like this are fun to twirl around the tip of your tongue.

For fun and games and finding out about things, read Owl or the Canadian Children's magazine. Rescue a bid, paint an egg, fill in a crossword puzzle. These magazines are jam-packed with ideas and stories.

There is a lot of Canadian children's writing to celebrate. To join in the festivities, the library is planning a fun program for school age children. Come for puzzles, games and excitement on Saturday, November 19, at 11:00 a.m.

REGIONAL DISTRICT OF KITIMAT-STIKINE REFERENDUM BY-LAW NO. 94, 1977

Public notice is hereby given to the Electors of the defined portion of Electoral Area E, more commonly known as Thornhill-Queensway, that a poll shall be taken in accordance with the provisions of the "Municipal Act" to determine whether or not the electors wish to participate in the Thornhill Fire Service Loan Authorization By-law No. 50, Amending By-law No. 94.

To provide Fire Protection Service to the unincorporated community of Thornhill, it is necessary to increase the tax levy to increase the budget to the Thornhill Fire Department.

The following briefly sets out the proposed amendment:

The annual cost of providing Fire Protection Service to the unincorporated community of Thornhill, including capital, debt retirement, capital acquisition, and operational costs shall not exceed an annual levy of eight (8) mills.

Take notice that the above is a synopsis of a by-law that may be inspected at the Regional District Office, No.9-4644 Lazelle Avenue, Terrace, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and is not to be deemed an interpretation of the by-law.

The poll will be conducted at Thornhill Elementary School and Clarence Michiel School on the 19th day of November, 1977 between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m.

Ottawa Le Droit: According to recent newspaper stories, government employees in a branch of the secretary of state dealing with official-language minority groups may have been "forced" to leave their positions because they were "too favorable" to French-speaking groups outside Quebec.

That almost seems an absurdity. Since 1969, the secretary of state department has always strived to recruit program directors and officers who were openly sympathetic to these groups and who wouldn't hesitate to get "involved" on their behalf.

As a matter of fact, it was even from the midst of these French-speaking minorities outside Quebec that most of these people were recruited.

Those who worked with the provincial associations in the early 1970s well remember the devotion, objectivity and competence of these people.

But here we're being told of the departure of Gerard Gagne and his assistants who are cut from precisely that cloth.

It's nobody's secret that relations between the secretary of state and French-speaking communities outside Quebec aren't good and the main reason is that all that stays the same in the department is change: change of minister, change of directors, change of officers, changing structures, changing policies.

And all that occurs without anyone really knowing why, not even at the ministerial level.

What's certain, in any case, is that the word "continuity" isn't part of the little lexicon of these public servants and that the French communities outside Quebec, whose precariousness now is well known by everybody, must join with this government phantom which is opening its heart to Quebec's anglophone element to find a more sympathetic and less cantankerous clientele.

In a few days, State Secretary John Roberts will announce some "new" measures.

In light of what's currently happening in the official-language minority groups branch, the most acceptable thing he could do for us, would be to give someone higher up the whole file on French minorities outside Quebec. ...—Guy La-combe (Nov. 10)

Quebec economy
in rough shape

Chicoutimi Le Quotidien: For the first time in quite a while, the unemployment rate in the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean region (10.5 per cent) is slightly below that for the remainder of Quebec (11.5 per cent). At least that's what the most recent Statistics Canada report has disclosed.

Yet that's not a consolation since the Quebec economy has never been in worse shape.

The causes are complex and multiple, but even if certain investors are withholding projects because they haven't yet absorbed the shock of the election of an independentist government, the principal causes result from other factors such as the sluggish economic recovery of the industrialized countries of the Western world and a social democracy which has become almost cancerous.

Too many citizens wish to feed from the breasts of the state to the point of draining the economic forces.

Furthermore, one ascertains that if nationalism—that will of identifying oneself with the quite distinctive character of Quebecois society in the AngloSaxon context of North America—manifests itself with more vitality than ever, on the other hand the application of social democracy progressively turns to failure.

Too many people seem to await all from the "Provider State." Isn't Premier Rene Levesque, who has associated this concept of social democracy with his political program, in the process of establishing it?

In Quebec, one still enjoys the politics of confrontation, and the bosses, like the union leaders, mutually accuse each other of being in collusion with the state in order to disturb the balance of power.

Fight favourable for West

By CATHY McKER-

WASHINGTON (CP) — The rupture in Soviet-Somali relations, with its threat to support of Soviet naval and air operations in the Indian Ocean region, may turn out to be a significant advantage to Western powers, particularly the United States.

Indeed, Somalia's decision to expel about 6,000 Russian advisers and force closure of all Soviet military bases in that country marks another major setback for the Kremlin in northeastern Africa.

Originally, the Soviet Union wooed both Ethiopia and Somalia with military equipment and other aid.

But with Somali-bùists ece rebels attempting to win control of the Ogaden desert from Ethiopia, the K rem decided to throw its full support behind Addis Ababa after failing to persuade Somalia to halt its military activities.

SECRET TALKS FAIL Somali President Mohammed Siad Barre warned that continued Soviet and Cuban military backing of Ethiopia would place relations with Somali in great jeopardy. The Kremlin tried reconciliation but secret talks proved useless.

Now the forced evacuation of Soviet bases will end docking and port facilities which helped sustain Soviet air and naval operations in the Indian Ocean. The Russians still have bases in Aden, South Yemen and Ethiopian ports on the Red Sea but the Somali bases were much closer to the Indian Ocean operational area.

The Somalis have been bitter about Russia's support for Ethiopia. In addition, Somalia has cited growing numbers of Cuban troops fighting a soldiers. The U.S. state department said Monday that Cuba has increased its troop commitment to 550, up from about 150 a few weeks ago.

Somalia is not the only country in that region where the Russians have lost ground. Five months ago Sudan ejected its Soviet advisers and five years ago Egypt ousted Soviet military and civilian personnel.

LINKS SHIFT RAPIDLY

In fact, events have shown that old alliances can shift rapidly. At one time Ethiopia was a strong U.S. military customer.

Ethiopia is the larger of the two countries but Somalia is supported by oil-rich Arab states, including Saudi Arabia, Egypt, the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait.

The U.S., while trying to stay out of the conflict, has not completely withdrawn an earlier offer made with Britain and France to supply small quantities of defensive weapons to Somalia.

The U.S. also has started moves to open a civilian aid program for Somalia, thinking in terms of food, farming and health care. Undoubtedly, Somalia will also be looking to the West for greater military help while gambling that morale problems among Ethiopian troops may finally crack Ethiopian defences.

If Ethiopia prevails in the conflict, the Russians may be able to maintain a stronghold in the area but U.S. officials note that in losing support of Somalia, and the earlier rejection of the Russians by Sudan, the Kremlin has only one strong ally left in the Horn of Africa.

AECL dirt upturned again

By HOWIE COLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons public accounts committee returns to a year-old controversy today in a new attempt to follow the trail of agents' fees paid in the overseas sales of nuclear reactors.

J. Lorne Gray, the now retired president of the federally-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., heads the list of witnesses as the committee reopens its inquiry into the $17.8 million already paid in fees on sales to Argentina and South Korea.

Last January Gray said he could offer the committee little help in finding out who got a $2.4-million fee in the Argentinian sale, saying the money was paid into a Swiss bank account at the instructions of its Italian partner.

The partner, Italimpianti of Genoa, handled the arrangements with the agents and now refuses to say who they are.

Allan Lawrence, Progressive Conservative MP for Northumberland-Durham who chaired the committee last winter, said he feels the money can be traced if the government makes the effort.

NO REQUEST MADE

Lawrence visited Italy this fall and was told by government officials there that Ottawa had made no official request for information in the Italimpianti case.

He also felt a representation from the government would get information from Switzerland on the holders of the bank accounts, despite that country's secrecy laws.

Lawrence said he also wants to question Gray on his role since retirement as a consultant to the parent company of Italimpianti.

Ross Campbell, chairman and president of AECL, and John Foster, president until he was fired last spring over losses on the Argentinian sale, also are to appear before the committee.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said last July he had requested Foster's resignation as president after learning the company would lose $180 million on the Argentinian deal.

Foster was to have been given new responsibilities with the government company this fall, but resigned effective Oct. 31 to join an agency of the world Energy Conference.

RAISING QUESTIONS

Ron Huntington, Conservative MP for Capilano who now chairs the committee, says the members also will be raising more questions about the fees paid to an agent in the South Korean sale.

United Developments Inc. of Tel Aviv already has received $15.4 million in fees, but the auditor-general felt there was insufficient documentation to back $8.1 million of the payment.

Huntington says he hopes the committee can complete the hearings and present its report to the Commons before Christmas.

Slow growth
in store

By VIC PARSONS

OTTAWA (CP) — Eight of 10 provinces will experience growth rates of less than three per cent this year but a modest recovery in 1978 will bring some improvement, a private forecasting agency said Monday.

Alberta and British Columbia, with real growth rates of 5.5 per cent and four per cent respectively, will be the only provinces to exceed the three-per-cent level, the Conference Board in Canada says in a quarterly forecast.

The board, a private research agency which includes representatives from business, labor and government, said Ontario's growth of 2.5 per cent this year will fall short of earlier predictions and Newfoundland will show a real decline of 1.1 per cent.

Next year, the board said, five provinces will have growth rates of five per cent or more. The national average in 1978 is expected to be 4.9 per cent compared with this year's 2.9 per cent.

But five of the provinces will have 1978 unemployment rates of more than 10 per cent, the board predicts. The five are Quebec and the four Atlantic provinces.

The national unemployment rate is expected by the board to be 8.1 per cent next year, the same as this year.

SEES LITTLE CHANGE

The board said measures announced in the Oct. 20 "minibudget" of Finance Minister Jean Chretien will not alter the economic outlook substantially.

Three industries—agriculture, fishing and construction—will experience declines in real output this year, the board said, and below potential growth is expected for manufacturing, utility and service sectors.

The mining industry, which showed strength early in 1977, has weakened as the year has progressed. Forestry is the only industry which the board says will advance strongly this year.

Next year agricultural and fishing production will be higher, construction is expected to contribute significantly to the over-all recovery and manufacturing should be up, although still short of capacity.

However, the strong outputs in mining and forestry of this year will fall in 1978, with neither industry likely to match 1977 performances.

In 1978, Ontario, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island will join Alberta and B.C. as provinces with production growth above the national average.

A summary of the outlook for the provinces regionally follows:

Ontario: Real economic growth in the manufacturing and service sectors this year has been lower than previously expected. In its last forecast in August, the board had predicted growth of 3.5 per cent but now has dropped that to 2.5 per cent.

In 1978, Ontario growth is expected to be 5.2 per cent and the unemployment rate is predicted to drop slightly to 6.8 per cent from a 1977 average of seven per cent.

Quebec: Despite very weak growth this year in the goods production sector, the service sector will pick up the slack and 1977 growth will be 2.8 per cent, just below the national average.

Although Quebec's growth next year will be 4.5 per cent, it will perform badly in comparison to the rest of the country with the third lowest rate among the provinces, the board said.

Unemployment will continue to grow to an annual average of 11 per cent in 1978, up from 10.3 per cent this year.

RECOVERY SLOW

Manitoba: Real economic growth this year will be only nine-tenths of one per cent but will rise to 3.7 per cent in 1978. The improvement next year will be too slow to bring about any major reduction in unemployment so the jobless rate will be 5.8 per cent, down marginally from 5.9 per cent in 1977.

Saskatchewan: The province faces two relatively poor years with real growth this year of 1.4 per cent and in 1978 of 2.8 per cent due to low prices for agricultural products. The jobless rate of 4.5 per cent, second lowest in the country, will be the same next year.

Alberta: The provincial growth rate this year will be 5.5 per cent, with only the agricultural sector showing weakness. In 1978, real output will increase to 5.7 per cent. Unemployment next year will decline to 4.1 per cent from 4.4 per cent this year.

British Columbia: Real growth will increase to five per cent in 1978 and there will be a significant improvement in the unemployment rate. Next year the jobless rate will be 7.9 per cent compared with 8.5 per cent in 1977. Construction and the service industries will contribute most to growth in 1978.

Iona's a hard worker

Some letters in the past criticized our MP, Mrs. I. Campagnolo for lack of action on certain issues. I would like to write about the help I have received from her office in the past few months.

I should first say that I am not a member of the Liberal Party, and this is the first contact I have had with her office.

My problem began when I received a job offer with an overseas company, and tried to obtain a Canadian Passport.

I discovered that when my parents obtained their Canadian citizenship many years ago, I was not registered even though they had requested it. I was told that it would take 6-8 months to obtain my citizenship through normal channels.

My job depended on my being available for work in a much shorter time. I tried to speed up the time required for the paperwork. As anyone who has dealt with normal government red tape knows, this is almost impossible.

I contacted Mrs. Campagnolo's office for help. I must say that my regard for MP's has increased tremendously.

One of her aids, Ms. L. Lambert spent many hours, some of which were far past her normal work day, contacting various government officials. She did all the paperwork, and in less than two months I received a travel document and my citizenship.

I feel that an MP which is concerned about constituents as individuals rather than issues which will gain votes is a valuable person to have as our representative. The party to which they belong should be a secondary issue. Unless our MP is willing to work hard to represent us, we will gain little regardless of the party to which they belong.

I would like to thank the many people in her office and in the Citizenship Dept. which have helped me in the past few months.

Sincerely yours,
T. Dimitrov

The teachers tried hard to beat the Harlem Clowns in Monday night's basketball game at Caledonia High School, but they just didn't have the height. The shortest player on the Clowns was 5'4". Mike Ireland was the only local team member to match the height of any of their players. Nevertheless, the game was fast and well played. The teachers had a few tricks of their own to match the visitors antics. The final score of the game was 59-53.

BLOMBERG MAY SIGN
NEW YORK (AP) — The Daily News says Ron Blomberg, sidelined most of the last two years with injuries, is expected to sign a $600,000 four-year, no-cut baseball contract Thursday with Chicago White Sox. Blomberg apparently made the decision after failing to get the four-year contract he wanted from New York Mets, who had chosen him in the free agent draft last month.

World Cup finals soon

France or Bulgaria and possibly Italy will be added to the World Cup soccer finals in Argentina and England may be eliminated following five group matches tonight.

France and Bulgaria meet in Paris in the final match of the Group 5 qualifying with France needing a win to advance to next year's finals in Argentina.

The Bulgarians will head the group if they win or draw. All 50,000 tickets have been sold for the game at Parc des Princes.

The Italians, who meet England at Wembley Stadium in London, are strong favorites to gain the qualifying spot from Group 2. A draw or win today will give the berth to Italy regardless of the outcome of Italy's game next month with lowly Luxembourg.

England, playing its final group match, needs a lop-sided win over Italy to keep alive its slim hopes of going to Argentina. The Italians can lose to England and still gain a place in the finals on goal difference.

999 goals for Howe

By GERRY SUTTON
The Canadian Press
Gordie Howe, a 49-year-old right winger who will become a grandfather in April, got a little upset Tuesday night and it cost him a chance to score his 1,000th career goal.

Howe, in his first year with New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association and the 30th season in his professional career, was assessed a minor and a 10-minute misconduct mid-way through the third period in a game against Indianapolis Racers.

The Whalers went on to win 6-4, tying a WHA record for consecutive victories. Before Howe was nabbed, the native of Floral, Sask., who started his pro career with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League in the 1946-47 season, had two shots on goal—both in the first period.

In the only other WHA game Tuesday, Pierre Guite's goal at 1:11 of a 10-minute sudden-death overtime period gave Quebec Nordiques a 7-6 decision over Winnipeg Jets.

The results gave the leading Whalers, 13-1-1, a five-point margin over the Jets. The Nordiques are third with 17 points, five ahead of the Racers.

Fishermen protest licence increases

VANCOUVER (CP) — Commercial salmon fishermen have protested bitterly against a federal government proposal that fishing licence fees be greatly stepped up to pay for the cost of the salmon enhancement program announced this year.

The reaction was disclosed Monday by program director Ron McLeod after a protest made by Chief Cecil Reid of the Bella Bella Indian band, one of a number of organizations polled by the salmon enhancement committee.

Reid wired Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc, terming the suggested licence increases double taxation.

He said that under one of three alternative proposals made by the committee, the assessment on a fisherman with a 20-ton seiner could be $8,000 a year.

McLeod said, however, that the proposals were made merely to get reaction from fishboat operators, processors and others like sports fishermen who have an interest in salmon runs.

UNVEILED PLAN

LeBlanc said in May that the government plans to spend $150 million over five years on rearing ponds, hatcheries and other rehabilitation measures. In the second phase of the program, an expenditure of between $30 million and $60 million a year could be made over a period of 15 years.

A consensus of the reaction to the licence increases suggested is being compiled and recommendations will be made to the federal cabinet, McLeod said.

He could not give any indication of the recommendations to be made, but he said that generally, the groups were opposed to the principle of recovering government expenditures on the production of Pacific runs.

Some groups agreed on the principle of recovery under certain conditions, he said, but groups such as the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union and the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, which represents Indian fishermen, were opposed without qualification.

There was also concern about the amount of the cost that should be recovered, and the rate of recovery, especially in the initial years of the program. WANTS ROLE

Respondents, including spokesmen for sports fishermen, also said that if they paid a part of the cost they should have a role in management of the program, and that bureaucratic costs should be held to a minimum.

Salmon processors expressed concern at any federal levy unless the deal is sanctioned in a federal-provincial agreement that would safeguard them from double taxation.

Enhancement committee economist David Reid said the alternatives put forward to obtain reaction were a licence fee based on the previous year's landings, a fee based on a net ton basis and a fee on previous landings adjusted for the expected benefits for fishermen using various types of gear.

Under the first, he said, current fees of $400 for a seiner and $200 for gillnetters and trollers would have tripled in the initial five-year period of the program.

Under the second plan the fee per net ton would run from $150 to $400 per net ton after 15 years, while under the third proposal the initial fee on seiners would be about $1,800 since they would be the first to benefit from increased sockeye, pink and chum runs.

United States worried about pipeline for Midwestern

refineries. A consortium proposes to ship the crude oil by tanker to Kitimat, B.C., 400 miles northwest of Vancouver, and then move it through pipelines to refineries in Montana, North Dakota and Minnesota.

The Northern Tier Pipeline Co., wants to establish a port at Port Angeles on the Strait of Juan de Fuca and then transship the crude to the Midwest via a 1,500-mile pipeline running from the tanker facility to Coldbrook, Minn.

SEEMS DOOMED

Seattle mayor Wes Uhlman agreed with Marlenee's argument and also said the Kitimat proposal seems "doomed to failure" because of unresolved native claims in the area plus strong opposition from Canadian environmental groups.

Monday's debate pitted Rep. Don Bonker (D-Wash.) against most of his committee colleagues as he strongly opposed the Port Angeles proposal, a view shared by most of his constituents in that area. Instead he favors the Kitimat plan.

Bonker said there "are strong indications that a new oil port at Kitimat could make the best sense for Washington state, for the United States and for Canada."

A Kitimat port, he said, could be operational more quickly than a Port Angeles facility, reduce oil tanker mileage along the coasts of B.C. and Washington and serve existing refineries in Vancouver and in Washington as well as those located in the Northern Tier states. The two-day hearing on the issue of distribution of Alaskan oil continues today.

Another artificial sweetener to go

STONY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — Researchers here said Tuesday the U.S. Public Health Service has notified them that preliminary reports showed a chewing gum sweetener called Xylitol caused tumors in laboratory animals.

The researchers from the State University of New York at Stony Brook cited the reports in announcing they have suspended a project in which school children had just begun chewing gum containing Xylitol.

The school children, 300 sixthgraders in the William Floyd Union Free School District on Long Island, had been chewing the gum for only three days when the project was halted, the university said.

The maximum amount of gum any child had chewed was nine sticks, university officials said. Researchers at Stony Brook's School of Dental Medicine had been studying the possible beneficial effects on dental decay of two gums, one sweetened by Xylitol and the other by a natural sweetener called Sorbitol.

Late last week, the National Institute of Dental Research, a branch of the U.S. Public Health Service, informed the researchers of the laboratory animal study. The Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co., of Chicago, recently introduced a brand of gum called Orbit containing Xylitol. Manufacturers have been looking for alternatives to saccharin, which has been found to produce tumors in animals and may be banned.

PRODUCED TUMORS

Xylitol is a natural sweetener obtained from plant sources. Stony Brook said it has been informed that when given to laboratory animals in large doses, the tumors. Dr. J. Howard Oaks, vicepresident for health sciences at Stony Brook, said the two dental researchers conducting the project, Dr. Gary Leske and Dr. Louis Ripa, immediately halted their project. The two researchers said in a prepared statement:

"At this time, it is prudent to suspend the study pending the evaluation by the (U.S.) Food and Drug Administration of the new evidence from animal studies of the effects of Xylitol. We want to assure the participating students and their parents that the chewing that has already occurred has not been injurious to health. Only nine sticks of Xylitol gum have been consumed by participants in the study."

The three-year study was being conducted under a $210,000 contract from the Institute of Dental Research.

Stony Brook said the project had been endorsed by the Tenth District Dental Society on Long Island and was the first federally-subsidized academic study of the sweetener in the United States.

Stony Brook said the students who participated had all volunteered and their parents had given consent.

Evil Knievel goes to jail

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (Reuter) —

Motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel, who adamantly refused to apologise for what the prosecution called a brutal baseball bat attack on a writer, was sentenced Monday to spend his nights and weekends in jail for six months.

State Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeedie said he was impressed by the forthright and honest way in which Knievel had pleaded guilty to the attack on Sept. 13 against author Sheldon Saltman, who wrote a book about him.

"But he reacted in a way which violates all the precepts of civilized society," the judge said of Knievel.

Prosecutor Stanley Weissberg said the attack, which left Saltman with a broken arm and wrist, was "a vicious attack with a deadly weapon, one that by hitting the right spot on Mr. Saltman's body could have caused his death."

Under cross-examination, Knievel admitted he had taken a second man along to hold Saltman down during the attack at the 20th Century-Fox film studio. "The man went with me because I had two broken arms. He didn't want me to hit Mr. Saltman in the head so he helped me hit him in the arms," said Knievel. He refused to identify the man who had helped him attack the author.

Knievel is to begin his sentence on Nov. 21.

He will be able to carry on with his entertainment work during weekdays, but will have to enter a minimum security jail at night and weekends.

Knievel told reporters outside court: "He is a fair judge. ... He gave me a fair shake."

Gens de l'Air take tests too

QUEBEC (CP) — The Association des Gens de l'Air du Quebec, which represents French-speaking controllers and pilots, has decided to end its boycott of federal simulation tests into bilingual air traffic control.

Roger Demers, president of the association, said in an interview today that three representatives will begin participating in simulation tests at Hull, Que., next Tuesday.

The association has boycotted the tests, run in conjunction with a federal commission of inquiry into air traffic bilingualism, since they began in January.

Demers said the association changed its mind because the federal transport department has complied with most conditions the association set for its participation.

"We believe that 98 per cent of our conditions are filled," he said.

Among the "essential" conditions that Ottawa has filled recently is a commitment to Quebec jurisdiction over Quebec air space now in the hands of the Moncton, N.B., control centre to Montreal.

This transfer is to take place over the next two or three years. In addition, some Quebec air space controlled from Winnipeg is to be transferred to Montreal.

Also, the federal government did not intervene at recent hearings to object to an attempt by the Gens de l'Air to decertify the Canadian Air Traffic Association as bargaining agents for Quebec controllers, Demers said.

GAINED CONFIDENCE Finally, Demers said he now has more confidence in Ottawa's program to introduce French in visual flight rules at all airports except Montreal's Dorval. This decision results from an interim report by the inquiry.

Despite participation in the simulation tests, Demers said the Gens de l'Air still do not accept the mandate of the three-member commission.

"It changes nothing ... We don't accept the decision by the government to pass its responsibility to a commission of inquiry."

The commission was established by Transport Minister Otto Lang after an emotional 1976 strike by pilots opposed to bilingualism in the air. But Demers said the climate has "really changed" in the aviation community.

"The English-speaking world of aviation is accepting the presence of French in the air."

Demers said one hears "no more declarations based on fanaticism and racism."

"It's been a question of education."

The association representatives are to participate in the second phase of simulation tests which will simulate bilingual take-offs and landings.

The first part of the tests simulated high-altitude flight in air traffic corridors using French as well as English in communications.

Demers says he expects the tests to be completed next spring. The three judges will then write their final report.

TESTED TIPS TO HELP YOU

Staining Wood

You can add beauty to your home with staining, without straining your back or budget. A wide range of new earth-inspired stain colors is now available for exterior and interior wood surfaces and applying them is as easy as applying a coat of paint.

Before you begin staining, it's wise to gather the tools needed to do the job right. These include: paint brushes, tack rags, drop cloth or staining cloths for use in wiping interior semi-transparent stains. If you are using an oil base stain, it should be applied with a natural bristle brush. For latex stains, use a synthetic or polyester bristle brush.

The most important decision a homeowner has to make is in choosing the just-right color and stain effect desired—one that brings out the grain character of wood and enhances its color or one that disguises unappealing grain pattern and plays up the texture of wood.

To simplify color selection and show both opaque and semi-transparent color stain effects on wood, one company, PPG Industries, which makes Rez wood stain products, has introduced an easy-to-use stain selection system. It allows the consumer to see solid and transparent color effects in 144 colors. These include traditional and earth-oriented tones, rich woodsy greens, subtle tans, browns and neutrals, and new blues and grays to capture a New England weathered look. All are available in oil and latex bases, solid or semi-transparent and for interior or exterior use.

Once you have chosen the color and type of finish, it is always a good idea to test the stain on the individual wood type to which it will be applied. All woods take stain differently and pre-testing provides an added guarantee. If possible, take a sample of the wood to your local paint dealer so he can pretest the effect of the color and finish you have chosen before making a final decision.

Obviously, exterior stains are formulated to provide color retention for wood surfaces and long-wearing protection from the harmful effects of sunlight and weather. Interior stains are primarily decorative. So, if wear is indicated, such as with foot traffic on interior wood plank flooring or with greasy marks that come with children's fingerprints on paneling, then a final coat of a clear gloss or satin varnish is recommended.

Whether you choose a solid, semi-transparent or an interior wiping stain, today there is tremendous color latitude in wood stains to use in creating durable and decorative effects for siding, paneling, plank floors, exposed beams, sun decks and furniture.

Marsh World

PEAT LANDS — Vast areas of North America are covered by peat. Peat accumulates in wet areas, such as bogs and fens where a combination of low temperature, excessive moisture, and often high acidity inhibits the normal decomposition of dead plant material. Peatlands are usually unproductive for waterfowl because the soil nutrients are tied up chemically in the undecomposed peat, and are not available to grow the types of food plants and invertebrates on which ducks and geese thrive. Ducks Unlimited is presently investigating techniques for managing peat areas to increase their potential for waterfowl.

HEART PATIENT DIES

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) — A woman given a second heart in a transplant operation three weeks ago died Sunday when she fell from a window at Grootte Schuur Hospital, a spokesman said. Elizabeth Nel, 34, was given a second heart in what is known as a piggy back operation Oct. 22. She was South Africa's 18th patient to undergo this type of operation.

The Secret Life Of The Forest FIRES AND FORESTS

Most people would agree that nothing is more terrifying and destructive than a forest fire out of control. That's why people who use forests for recreation should be careful with fire: break their matches, douse their fires, watch their cigarette butts.

A lot of people probably don't realize, however, that fire is also an important tool of foresters, especially a controlled ground fire.

In certain kinds of forests, foresters use fire to clear away competitor trees, control fungus diseases and strip away the brush that can choke the forest floor so much that seedlings have no place to start.

Some people also think roads ruin forests, but not anyone who has tried to fight a fire in one. A fire out of control in a forest without roads is almost impossible to stop unless you quickly build a road.

The best way, the experts say, is to bulldoze a 15-foot-wide road, or five line, across the path of the fire and then start a fire backwards toward the oncoming fire. When the two fires meet, it's under control.

Another thing you can do is drop in smoke jumpers. They can dig a fire line, but it may not be wide enough or quick enough to stop the fire.

Unfortunately, in some

ALTHOUGH SOME PEOPLE THINK ROADS RUIN FORESTS, this one saved the trees on the left from the fire that destroyed the ones on the right.

SOMETIMES FIRES ARE GOOD FOR A FOREST. They burn disease out of some trees, such as the juvenile longleaf pine (left), and hold back the competitors of others, as with the giant Sequoias.

forests it's unlawful to bulldoze fire lines. As a result, fires in these areas can be devastating because the only thing really effective is a change in the weather.

In St. Regis Paper Company's more than 5.5 million acres of forest land, there are thousands of miles of roads. So when a lightning fire starts, two men in a pickup truck can usually put it out.

oped the test, said in an interview. He said the test now uses bulky equipment, but he estimated that a portable device may be developed in three to five years.

The White centre researchers said their technique may serve as the basis for more uniform laws on driving while under the influence of marijuana.

The test, developed by Soares and Dr. Stanley Gross, still is in "the pioneering stages" and cannot be used in courts, said Victor Reeves of the £1 if or n department's blood alcohol and experimental drug assay program.

Roadside pot test

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Researchers said Monday they have devised a practical test for measuring the level of marijuana in the blood—one that eventually may be made portable and used by police to test motorists who may be high.

It is being studied by a federal drug agency and the California Highway Patrol.

"At the moment, it's a test that has to be done in the lab, but it's one that conceivably could be refined into a roadside test," Dr. Jim Soares, one of the White Memorial Medical Centre researchers who devel-

Homemade Meat Sauce For Late Summer Grill

Sauces have always been used to enhance meats. They can glorify faithful money savers such as meatloaf and hamburgers. Why not create your own piquant and unusual meat sauce from an excellent canned spaghetti sauce with meat. Make plenty of it, store it in the refrigerator to use on all sorts of cuts, such as pork chops, which are less expensive now, or canned luncheon meat. This "homemade" sauce costs much less than the "store bought variety" and goes far in putting economical cuts of meat on the best-dressed list.

HOMEMADE MEAT SAUCE

- 1 large clove garlic, chopped
- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- 1/4 cup orange juice concentrate
- 1 can (15 oz.) Chef Boy-ar-dee® Spaghetti Sauce with Meat
- 2 tablespoons wine vinegar
- 1/8 teaspoon allspice
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire Sauce
- 2 tablespoons Gulden's® Spicy Brown Mustard
- 1/4 cup raisins
- 2 packets G. Washington® Rich Brown Seasoning & Broth
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon dark molasses
- 1/2 cup water

Saute garlic lightly in oil. Add remaining ingredients. Cover; simmer for 1 hour. Pour into blender. Blend for 3 minutes until smooth. Makes 1-1/2 pints.
